German literature began to break out of the socialist realist aesthetic of the 1940s, 1950s, and early 1960s and to win acceptance in the West as part of a larger German cultural project – as contributing not just to GDR literature but to German literature as a whole. German literature began, paradoxically, to “converge” at precisely

Literature and German Reunification: Brockmann, Stephen ...

This book is a systematic attempt to examine the literary consequences of German reunification. Placing the concept of the Kulturnation at the centre of its analysis, the book explores the ways in which literature both responds to and helps to constitute notions of German national identity. Previous studies of German literature have tended to avoid the problem of nationhood: this is one of the ...
